(a) Are there quantifiable goals and objectives that would be appropriate measures of the Commission's performance under the Mine Act for purposes of GPRA? If so, what are they?

(b) Are the following viable measures of performance for the Commission's administrative law judges: (1) Volume of outputs (number of dispositions), compared to previous years; (2) timeliness of outputs, including average inventory age and average age of decisions issued; and (3) quality of outputs, based on the number of appealed decisions in which the judges were reversed or affirmed by the Commission?

(c) Are the following viable measures of performance at the Commission level: (1) Volume of outputs (number of dispositions), compared to previous years; (2) timeliness of outputs, including average inventory age and average age of decisions issued; and (3) quality of outputs, based on the number of decisions in which the Commission was reversed or affirmed in the courts of appeals?

(d) In addition to quantifiable measures of performance, or in lieu of such measures, are there descriptive measures of the Commission's performance that would permit an accurate, independent determination of whether that performance meets the Commission's goals under the Mine Act?
